How a startup with a sustainable mission is transforming the Bay Area real estate industry

By Laura Waxmann

Laura Waxmann is a reporter at the San Francisco Business Times. She covers the real estate industry, affordable housing and other political issues in the area.

Email: lwaxmann@businessjournals.com

LinkedIn: https://www.linkedin.com/in/laurawaxmann/

Twitter: @laurawaxmann

Facebook: https://www.facebook.com/laurawaxmann/

Aug 4, 2021, 2:28pm PDT

In December 2020, the site’s developers won court approval for toxic soil targets state regulators.

The court order led the state’s Department of Toxic Substances Control to approve an agreement that the developers rely on in creating a site plan.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

In December 2020, the site’s developers won court approval for toxic soil targets state regulators.

The court order led the state’s Department of Toxic Substances Control to approve an agreement that the developers rely on in creating a site plan.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

In December 2020, the site’s developers won court approval for toxic soil targets state regulators.

The court order led the state’s Department of Toxic Substances Control to approve an agreement that the developers rely on in creating a site plan.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

In December 2020, the site’s developers won court approval for toxic soil targets state regulators.

The court order led the state’s Department of Toxic Substances Control to approve an agreement that the developers rely on in creating a site plan.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

In December 2020, the site’s developers won court approval for toxic soil targets state regulators.

The court order led the state’s Department of Toxic Substances Control to approve an agreement that the developers rely on in creating a site plan.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

In December 2020, the site’s developers won court approval for toxic soil targets state regulators.

The court order led the state’s Department of Toxic Substances Control to approve an agreement that the developers rely on in creating a site plan.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

In December 2020, the site’s developers won court approval for toxic soil targets state regulators.

The court order led the state’s Department of Toxic Substances Control to approve an agreement that the developers rely on in creating a site plan.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

In December 2020, the site’s developers won court approval for toxic soil targets state regulators.

The court order led the state’s Department of Toxic Substances Control to approve an agreement that the developers rely on in creating a site plan.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

In December 2020, the site’s developers won court approval for toxic soil targets state regulators.

The court order led the state’s Department of Toxic Substances Control to approve an agreement that the developers rely on in creating a site plan.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

In December 2020, the site’s developers won court approval for toxic soil targets state regulators.

The court order led the state’s Department of Toxic Substances Control to approve an agreement that the developers rely on in creating a site plan.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

In December 2020, the site’s developers won court approval for toxic soil targets state regulators.

The court order led the state’s Department of Toxic Substances Control to approve an agreement that the developers rely on in creating a site plan.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

In December 2020, the site’s developers won court approval for toxic soil targets state regulators.

The court order led the state’s Department of Toxic Substances Control to approve an agreement that the developers rely on in creating a site plan.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

In December 2020, the site’s developers won court approval for toxic soil targets state regulators.

The court order led the state’s Department of Toxic Substances Control to approve an agreement that the developers rely on in creating a site plan.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

In March, the site’s developers acquired the lease for a new hybrid office building.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The federal government has designated the greater Richmond area as a Superfund site.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.

The site’s developers have been working with state and local officials to address the toxic waste.